MY YOKE IS EASY

I have several clients and friends who suffer so very much because they didn't get what they needed from a parent, a friend, a spouse, a teacher, etc. How often I hear the pain in their voices as they recall childhood memories where they felt unwanted, unloved and unappreciated.

In those moments, I imagine myself becoming the one they need. If I can remind them how much they are wanted, if I can tell them how much they are loved or if I can remind them of how beautiful and special they are, perhaps they will finally be able to free themselves from the echoes of the past.

The problem is, we tend to reject the words and offerings of others, because we believe the validation must come from a particular person in a unique circumstance. But what if that isn't true? What if we begin to understand that Consciousness is in every form, and whether it is named Jodi, Mother, Bill or Daddy doesn't really matter. It's all the same thing.

If it is a mother's love you feel missing, I will be Mother and I will tell you how much you mean to me. If you need your father's approval, let me become Father so I can promise you I am always on your side. I can be Sister, Friend, Teacher, Lover or whatever else you need, because whatever was in them is also in me. Would it not serve the same purpose if it were I who whispered, "I love you?" Those words are not mine, they speak through me as Consciousness.

Never limit yourself by believing you can only receive love from particular people. Love is a divine quality, not a human personality. If you look closely, you see it everywhere. It may feel like it left when someone you loved left, but it had no where else to go. There is no where else to "go" but here. Infinity is not broken into here and there...it is everywhere, always. It has been here all along. You couldn't see it because you imagined it looked only one way. You put a face on it, and called it by a name. In doing so, you shut out all the other ways it showed up in your life. Accept it in whatever form it comes in! It's all the same thing.

God's love does not come and go in the form of people. It is ever-present. Physical bodies are transient, but whether space is filled by form or formlessness, it remains constant. People are merely representations—wrinkles in the field of Consciousness. But when the wrinkle is smoothed over, the blanket is not gone. You are always wrapped in it.

In time, as you recover and start to feel safe and loved, once again, I will take you one step further. When you are strong enough, I will ask you to open one more door.

I will place a mirror in front of you and lovingly say to you, "This is the one you've been looking for."

Everything you believed to be outside yourself never was. I am you and you are me. We are All That Is. You are the mother you always wanted. You are the father whose approval you sought. You are the husband or wife you believed had passed on to another place. I am the friend who stood beside you. I am you, being my friend. We are All That Is and All That Is is Consciousness. If only we had recognized it earlier, what suffering we could have avoided!

But until you recognize and remember...I will carry the yoke for both of us. Do not worry, for it is light. Consciousness is supporting All That Is.

What do you need me to be? How can I help you heal? What role can I take on in your play that will help you understand just how loved, how beautiful, how special you are.

I will say the words you need to hear. I will tell you I love you. I will comfort you and hold your hand. I will encourage and support you. I will protect you. I will never leave you.

Look no further. Consciousness is here.

I LOVE YOU!!
