ONENESS THINKING

Many people who follow what I teach struggle with the idea of God being who they are. Some can accept they are a “piece” of God—daughter or son—but not that God could actually BE them. I realize this is a tough concept, because we’ve lived in separation thinking for so very long. And certainly, looking at our mortal bodies, it doesn’t appear to be so.

And yet, if God is everywhere—God is All—how can this NOT be true? Are we saying then, God is everywhere except in the space where I stand? I balk at this idea, because I know the Creator to be inclusive, not exclusive. If God is ALL, there is nothing outside of that.

The ones that struggle most with this are Christians, which, to me, is the most ironic, since it was Christ Jesus who constantly demonstrated to us “I and my Father are one” and that “of myself, I can do nothing.”

Let’s look at two problem areas and do further investigation.

First, if we are believing ourselves to “be” our physical bodies, we see skin, bones, blood, and so forth, which seem to be encapsulated in a physical body which separates us from others. We can sense space between objects, so clearly, we are separate beings, right? Wrong. Even though Einstein proved this theory incorrect decades ago, the general population has not yet grasped that time and space aren’t even real. There is no space between anything...that is a brilliant illusion of the senses...given in order to experience Divine Essence as parts of the whole. But it isn’t really in “parts.” That is just an illusion. All of God is in All. God is All-in-all.

Even if you still cannot grasp the idea that physical expression is nothing more than possibility being experienced, then you must know, by now, that physical things, broken down into the quantum level, are nothing more than possibilities/probabilities. The atom, which scientists once believed to be tiny particles of matter, is now understood to be mostly empty space, with no "real" matter at all. There are tiny photons/light/energy/ which pop in and out of nothingness, but in and of themselves, these photons are nothing more than a wave of possibility...mere information. In fact, only 10% of our universe is energy (matter), the other 90% is space. And going down the rabbit hole even further...matter is information, and it is our 5 senses which are telling us it is solid and separate. Our nervous system translates what these photons are, and gives us the experience of them in form. It is done within the brain, and thus, the world isn't really outside of us at all...it is in our brain. In truth, however, neither space nor separation are even real. It is time to understand this, once and for all...it is an illusion of the senses.

Those who continue to think of themselves as a physical body living in a physical universe are the ones most confused. Because of this separation thinking, they still act as if they are victims of the outside world. To them, things happen in the outer world, and are then experienced in the inner being, when, in fact, it is just the opposite. These same people continue to pray to a distant, separate God who may or may not grant them their desires. They stand confused as to how to live the life that pleases this Creator, but evidence around them shows that bad people sometimes live wonderful lives while good people often suffer. It simply doesn't add up, but rather than investigate this further, they merely accept that it is "not for us to know." All of this, of course, comes from ancient understanding of our universe. There is no blame here...thousands of years ago, people simply did not have access to the information we now have, so they believed this to be true.

On the other hand, ancient wisdom was far more on target than much of today's understanding, because they mostly relied on faith and trust, which is exactly what we are having to do today. Why? Because science has openly admitted that there is a vast portion of the human experience that cannot be explained or known. We have no way to measure The Field/Consciousness because it is not energy. They are left to deal only with the effects of it, because they cannot find and measure the cause.

It might help you to understand this more clearly if I give an example.

If we take a soapy solution and blow a bubble with it, it appears that the bubble is floating in the air, with air contained inside it and air surrounding it on the outside. The air within the bubble is separated from the air outside the bubble, because there is a thin layer of soapy film between them, right? Not so!

If we were to magnify the bubble to the quantum level, we would, once again, see that the vast majority of the bubble is actually empty space. Only a tiny portion of the bubble is made up of the photons. The air is not impeded by the form of the bubble, at all. It is freely flowing through the bubble. The air within and the air without are one in the same. Going further, the photons/possibilities, are all contained within the same ONE space.

Okay. Hopefully, you are now in agreement that our physical separation is not as we believe it to be. The skin of our body does not separate us from one another. Rather, the space between is connecting us to All.

So...let's move on to that most difficult aspect. (The first one was a piece of cake, right? LOL). The mind.

Those who are okay with the idea of not being merely a body usually go to being a "soul" or "spirit" next. Of course, this is still separation thinking, right? It was, in fact, this very idea of separate souls in Heaven that moved me into the experience of ananda where I finally understood that unity means absolutely NO separation. Duh! Logically, we get that, but morally, we struggle with this idea to a great degree. We feel it is blasphemous to go any further than Heaven. And yet, if Heaven means we wander the golden streets as separate souls, I tell you...we are not experiencing Oneness. In order to reunite with God, we will have to give up our separate identities.

It seems we all have a mind of our own. Because we don't think the thoughts of others, and yet we exchange experiences with them, we must all have a unique identity. Although there are clearly exceptions to this...even Christ Jesus could read the thoughts of others as evidenced when he "knew" what his disciples would do in the crucifixion story...we don't want to explore these exceptions to the rule. Why? Because it will shatter our reality.

However, there are far more people than we know using what is called remote influencing. I, personally, have done this, but I tend to not draw attention to it, because it goes against a moral code of ethics for me. Nonetheless, it is being done everyday by many people. Many of them...you would be shocked to know...are deeply spiritual people. Much like subliminal advertising, this is being used to entice us to behave in certain manners. Governments are using remote influencing...have for years. No, this isn't conspiracy thinking. It is a fact.

If you know anything of remote influencing, you understand it is the ability to make another person do as you want them to do by controlling the mind of that person. I do not quibble with this, because I learned how to do this at a very young age. At first, I was quite fascinated with this ability, and my friends were blown away. They started asking me if I was some kind of witch or something. At that point, I decided it was something I didn't feel comfortable doing. I didn't want to be labeled in any negative sort of way, and, as a teenager, I wanted very much to blend. Nonetheless, it was clear that I could use my own mind to influence the behaviors of others. How?

I was taught, in my youth, that mortal mind isn't real. Just like the body, it is an illusion. I know, I know. Then how can I explain the thoughts in my head? Well, I will tell you this...the Source of those thoughts is not in your head. Consciousness is everywhere...not contained in a physical body. Science agrees. Again...that is an illusion of the senses, and we have fallen victim to the belief that the brain who is thinking is the One who is me. Oh my!

Wanna go down the rabbit hole further? Well, now that we've explained how the physical body isn't all that we thought it to be, guess what? The brain is part of that body, right? So, the brain is nothing more than possibility as well. It, too, is nothing more than photons of information, blinking in and out of nothingness.

And we know this, right? If we remove the brain from the body and lay it on the table, it does not think. The body and the brain require one another to exist, because without the 5 senses feeding information to the brain, there is nothing to process...and whallah...no "reality" to experience. Welcome to Wonderland!

And while we are lost in the surreal, let's also mention this thing called death. We believe when a body dies, the soul goes elsewhere. Well, in the beautiful understanding of how our cosmos is nothing but replications within replications, we need look no further than the cells of our own bodies to see this isn't so.

First, we need to understand that every single one of the trillions of cells that make up the body has a "brain" of its own.

Again...everything is mirrored, again and again, in the pieces of the whole. We are replications of the cosmos...made of the same elements...mirrors of the universe.

Now, in each second, many cells of our bodies die. To that cell, the world has ended. Life cannot go on. But we can clearly see that isn't so. In fact, we aren't even aware that cells are dying right now. They have no effect on us, whatsoever, unless massive amounts die...and even then, there is a belief, an expectation, behind that which makes it so. But can you see how a cell would think life has ended? Why? Because it cannot see it is within a massive body much grander than just that one cell. This is evidenced in everything we believe to be physical. If one star dies, does the entire universe vanish? No! If one flower falls from the bush, does the whole shrub cease to be? No! Everywhere you look, you will see this to be true. It is the same with us. When this physical body dies, Consciousness doesn't even wince. It lives on...as do I. Why? Because I am not simply a separate cell of God. I am contained in the whole of it. I AM it. But, I digress...

Consciousness, you see, is All There Is. Some call this God, while others call it The Field. It is the same. It is the One, Being. Being All That Is. It is experiencing itself through us, as us. We—believing ourselves to be separate beings—are the participants in the grand illusion, giving it expression. As we volunteer to pretend to be the cells of God, we allow God the fun of experiencing the physical realm. With the creation of light/thought, came the possibility of form. To experience form requires bodies with senses. To translate the information, we need brains. To believe ourselves separate requires an ego...a mind that identifies with the body. But who is it behind the whole experience of Being? It is God. There is nothing else. Your separate identity is an illusion...albeit, a fun one, if you understand it to be so!

Once you step back away from this illusion long enough to really contemplate how it all came to be, you will not be disappointed nor afraid. You will be awake.

You will stop calling things bad, but will understand these experiences to be resistance ideas only...created by the ego mind who continues to keep you in the dark about who you really are. You will see that every time you bought into these beliefs, you gave power to the ego, increasing its identity as a separate self. I know people will struggle with all this. They always have! But one day, you might begin to embrace this idea, and understand you've always had the ability to remember your oneness with All. Perhaps you will even welcome what these resistance beliefs are showing you, and you will understand why they appear all around you. You will realize nothing is either good nor bad. It simply "is," playing at being physical.

With all this ado about nothing, I hope you will begin to understand why I continue to say nothing can be apart from God. You can't be merely a piece of the whole, for you are All That Is. Every "thing" you believe to be separate from you is nothing but a replication of you, having an experience from a different perspective. All perspectives, however, are coming from the ONE and the only Divine Mind. The ideas that keep you locked in separation are beliefs your ego has embraced in order to give itself a life of its own. And is that a bad thing? No. For that, too, is God, simply Being.

You are God.

Think about it! LOL

Join Meta-ET (TM) practitioner and participant in the milestone movie, Try It On Everything, Jodi McDonald, the second Saturday of every month, from 10:00 a.m.-noon, at the New Braunfels Unity Church of Practical Christianity for Borrowing Benefits sessions. You won't want to miss this! All sessions are presented on a love offering basis. Prizes and refreshments are provided each month. I give out at least one free Meta-ET session each time we meet, so if you have been wanting to try it but feel you can't afford it, this is your opportunity. You'll be grateful, I promise!

If you bring TWO guests with you or if you refer a client for a personal session, you win a FREE private session for yourself, so be sure to pay it forward!! (Be sure to let me know if you bring two guests.)

"You'll be glad you attended," says one participant, "because Jodi not only shows you how to let go of the problems and diseases in your life, but she also teaches from her own metaphysical background. You'll get much more than your money's worth and we have a lot of fun, as well."

Using Meta-ET (TM), we understand how our inner beliefs are mirrored in the 3-D world that appears to be around and outside us. We recognize how and why our disconnection beliefs show up as problems and diseases in our bodies, as well. Tapping on the meridian points, while focusing on the issue of disconnection, we release the energy of that block, allowing limiting, non-serving beliefs to fall away.

In our July class, I will help you understand why bad things happen to good people, and why they aren't really bad. If we want to live lives of joy, it becomes very important to take back the power we've given to the outer world, so we can begin to experience the beauty of our inner reflection of bliss and peace in this physical experience. Ultimately, however, we discover the negative experiences were only illusions.

We have work to do.

Come on...grab some friends and join us!

THE "A DIVINE YOU" TOUR

Some of you may have noticed I have removed all my links to the "A Divine You" tour. I should explain that I have withdrawn from the tour, but I very much appreciate all those of you who supported me in the opening event in San Antonio, TX.

I am currently working on my own tour...going solo...and hope to have more details on that in the next ezine! Please stay tuned to my blog site for more on that, as I have some exciting news to share about what is happening in my life since the last event.

I wish Michael well, and know that all things worked out for the best, and I send him much love and light in his journey of life.

THANK YOU, DEAR FRIENDS, FOR ALL YOUR LOVE AND SUPPORT!

Coming soon....

I am working on Meta-ET Cds which will be ready for purchase in July!!!

I will also be appearing on some radio programs in the near future, and I'll be letting you know more about that in my blog. I hope you will be listening in!
